DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

2. Claims 4 and 5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. The claims recite the limitation "the slot" in line 1. It is unclear which slot is being referred to.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

4. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Javina et al. (US 3,367,337).

Regarding claim 1, Javina et al. disclose an instrument capable of pulling ticks out of the skin of animals or humans, comprising: a longitudinal grip piece (arms 2 and 3) for gripping the instrument and an end piece (arms 5), which is at least partially flattened (Figure 7), having at least in part, a first slot for gripping the tick (between arms 5), which end piece terminates in an essentially fork-like shape (when opened), which shape has at least two prongs, between which a space is formed for grasping a tick, characterized in that the grip piece has a second slot (between arms 2 and 3) in order to permit the space between the prongs of the end piece to be varied, where the slots are connected together by a film hinge 7 (where the word 'film' does not set forth any inherent structure in relation to a hinge). Regarding claim 2, the first slot has an essentially V-shaped cross-section (portions of the first slot have a v-shaped cross-section when the arms are opened). Regarding claim 3, the second slot when viewed in a direction essentially parallel to the first slot has a non-uniform width (Figure 7). Regarding claim 4, the slot width varies essentially parallel to the longitudinal extension of the grip piece (Figure 7). Regarding claim 5, the first slot width at least in a transition between grip piece and end piece is enlarged with respect to sections of the first slot adjacent to this transition (as seen in Figure 1 or Figure 3; these features would be present in the Figure 7 embodiment). Regarding claim 6, the grip piece is symmetrical with respect to rotation (Figure 7).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.

3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
 4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.
7. Claims 7 and 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Javina et al. (US 3,367,337) in view of Colgan et al. (US 2002/0035312).

Regarding claims 7 and 8, Javina et al. disclose the device as described above which is intended for surgical use (Title). Javina et al. fail to disclose a light source or magnifying lens. Colgan et al. teach that it is desirable to provide a light source and lens (magnifying or focusing) directed towards the end of a surgical forceps in order to better visualize a surgical target (col. 1, lines 17-57; col. 4, lines 15-19). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art in view of Colgan et al. to have provided a light source and lens for directing light to the end-piece of Javina et al. in order to better visualize a surgical target.
